

The Future of Volunteering: Creating Greater Impact

21 November 2016

What do nursing homes and volunteering have in common?

If bingo, lunch and a song / dance performance are all that come to mind, we'd like to challenge you to think again.

Being 80 and in a wheelchair doesn't prevent one from yearning to learn and gain new experiences. Stereotypes and over-medicalising a person's condition do.

We can be more creative in the way we engage our seniors and we need to.

Because you only have so little time and energy to create meaningful experiences for both you and the senior. Because issues like 'shortage of manpower' is not something any one person, organisation or the government can resolve. And because in future, care home seniors will be more educated, discerning and used to a way of life that's foreign to many of the current seniors.

Will it still be bingo, lunch and a song-and-dance routine?
Rethink the way we age. Make ageing something you would look forward to, not dread.

Click here to view how you can give back with greater impact